

The 2000 PGA Tour Season: Tiger Did it all and Nearly Won 'Em All

Tiger Woods is frequently compared to Jack Nicklaus, Sam Snead and many of golf's greats. This analysis, however, takes a step back to understand his greatness relative to his peers during his time as a professional golfer (1996 - 2019).

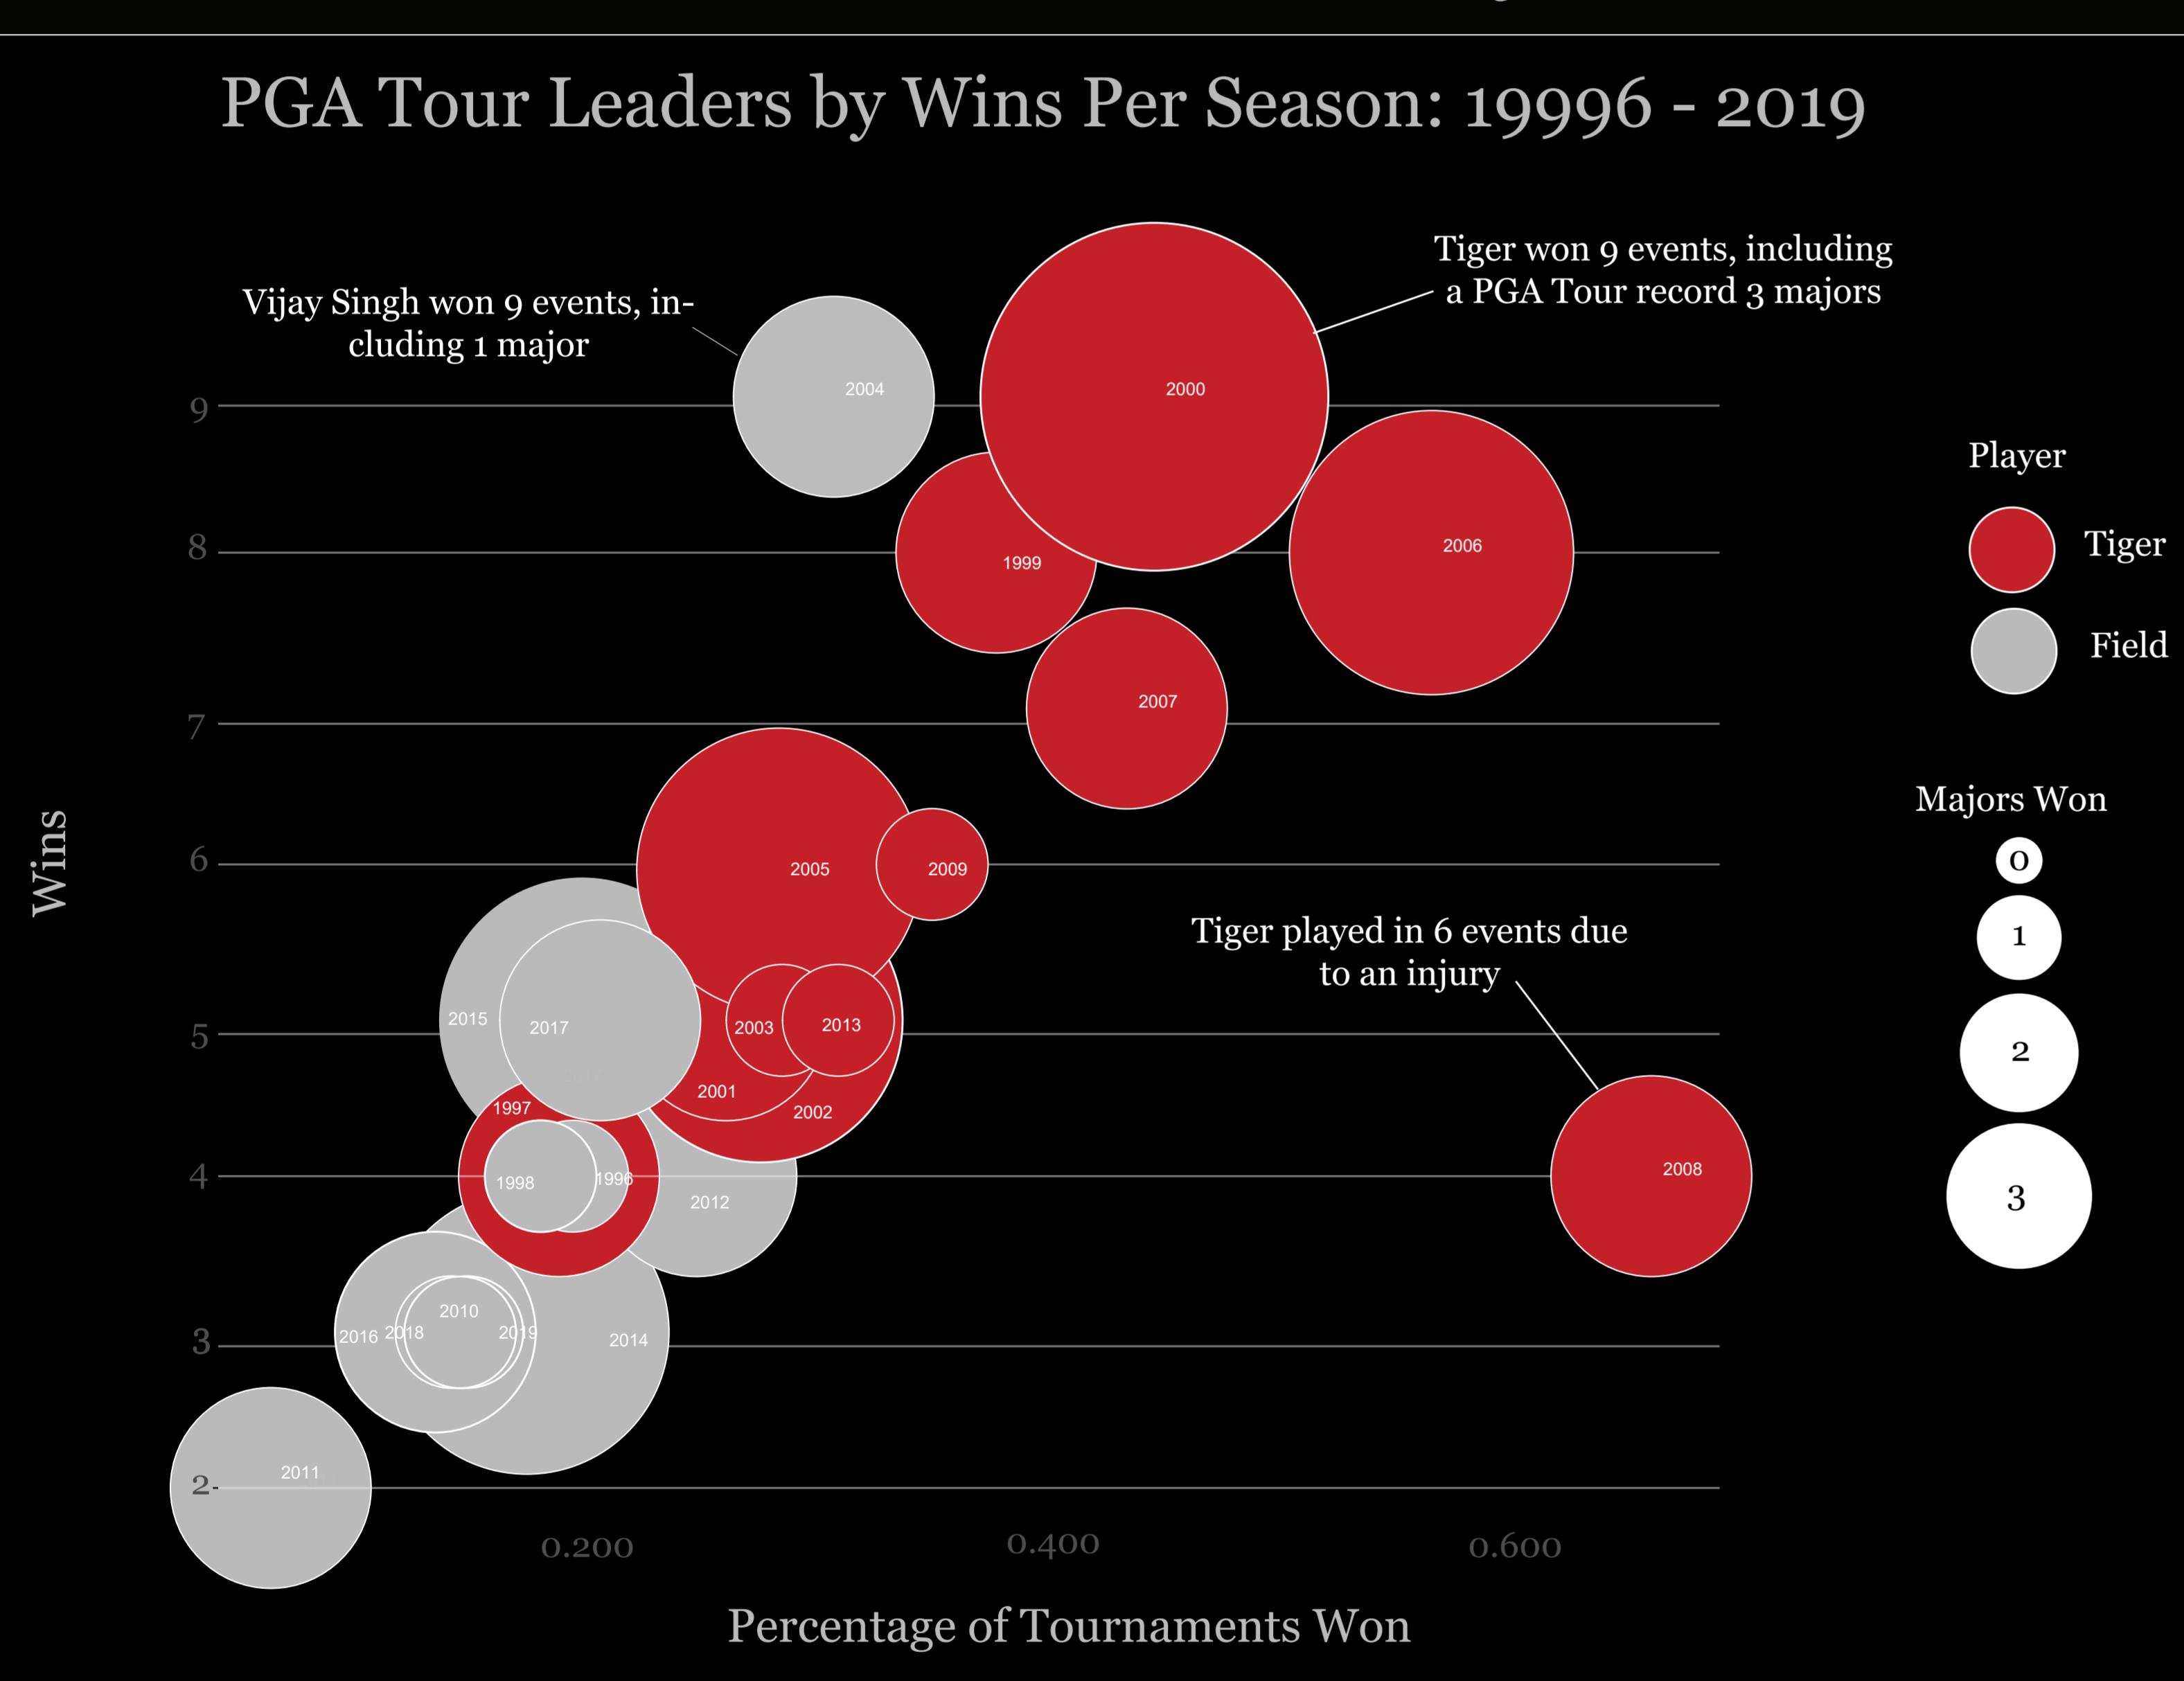

Audience: Tiger Woods has captivated golf and sports fans, which has lead to many sports debates about his overall greatness. This analysis will resonate with passionate PGA Tour and sport enthusiasts.

Key Questions: Throughout the analysis one should be able to identify: Who had the greatest season on the PGA Tour from 1996 - 2019? What golfers were most successful against Tiger?, What did Tiger do well in 2000?

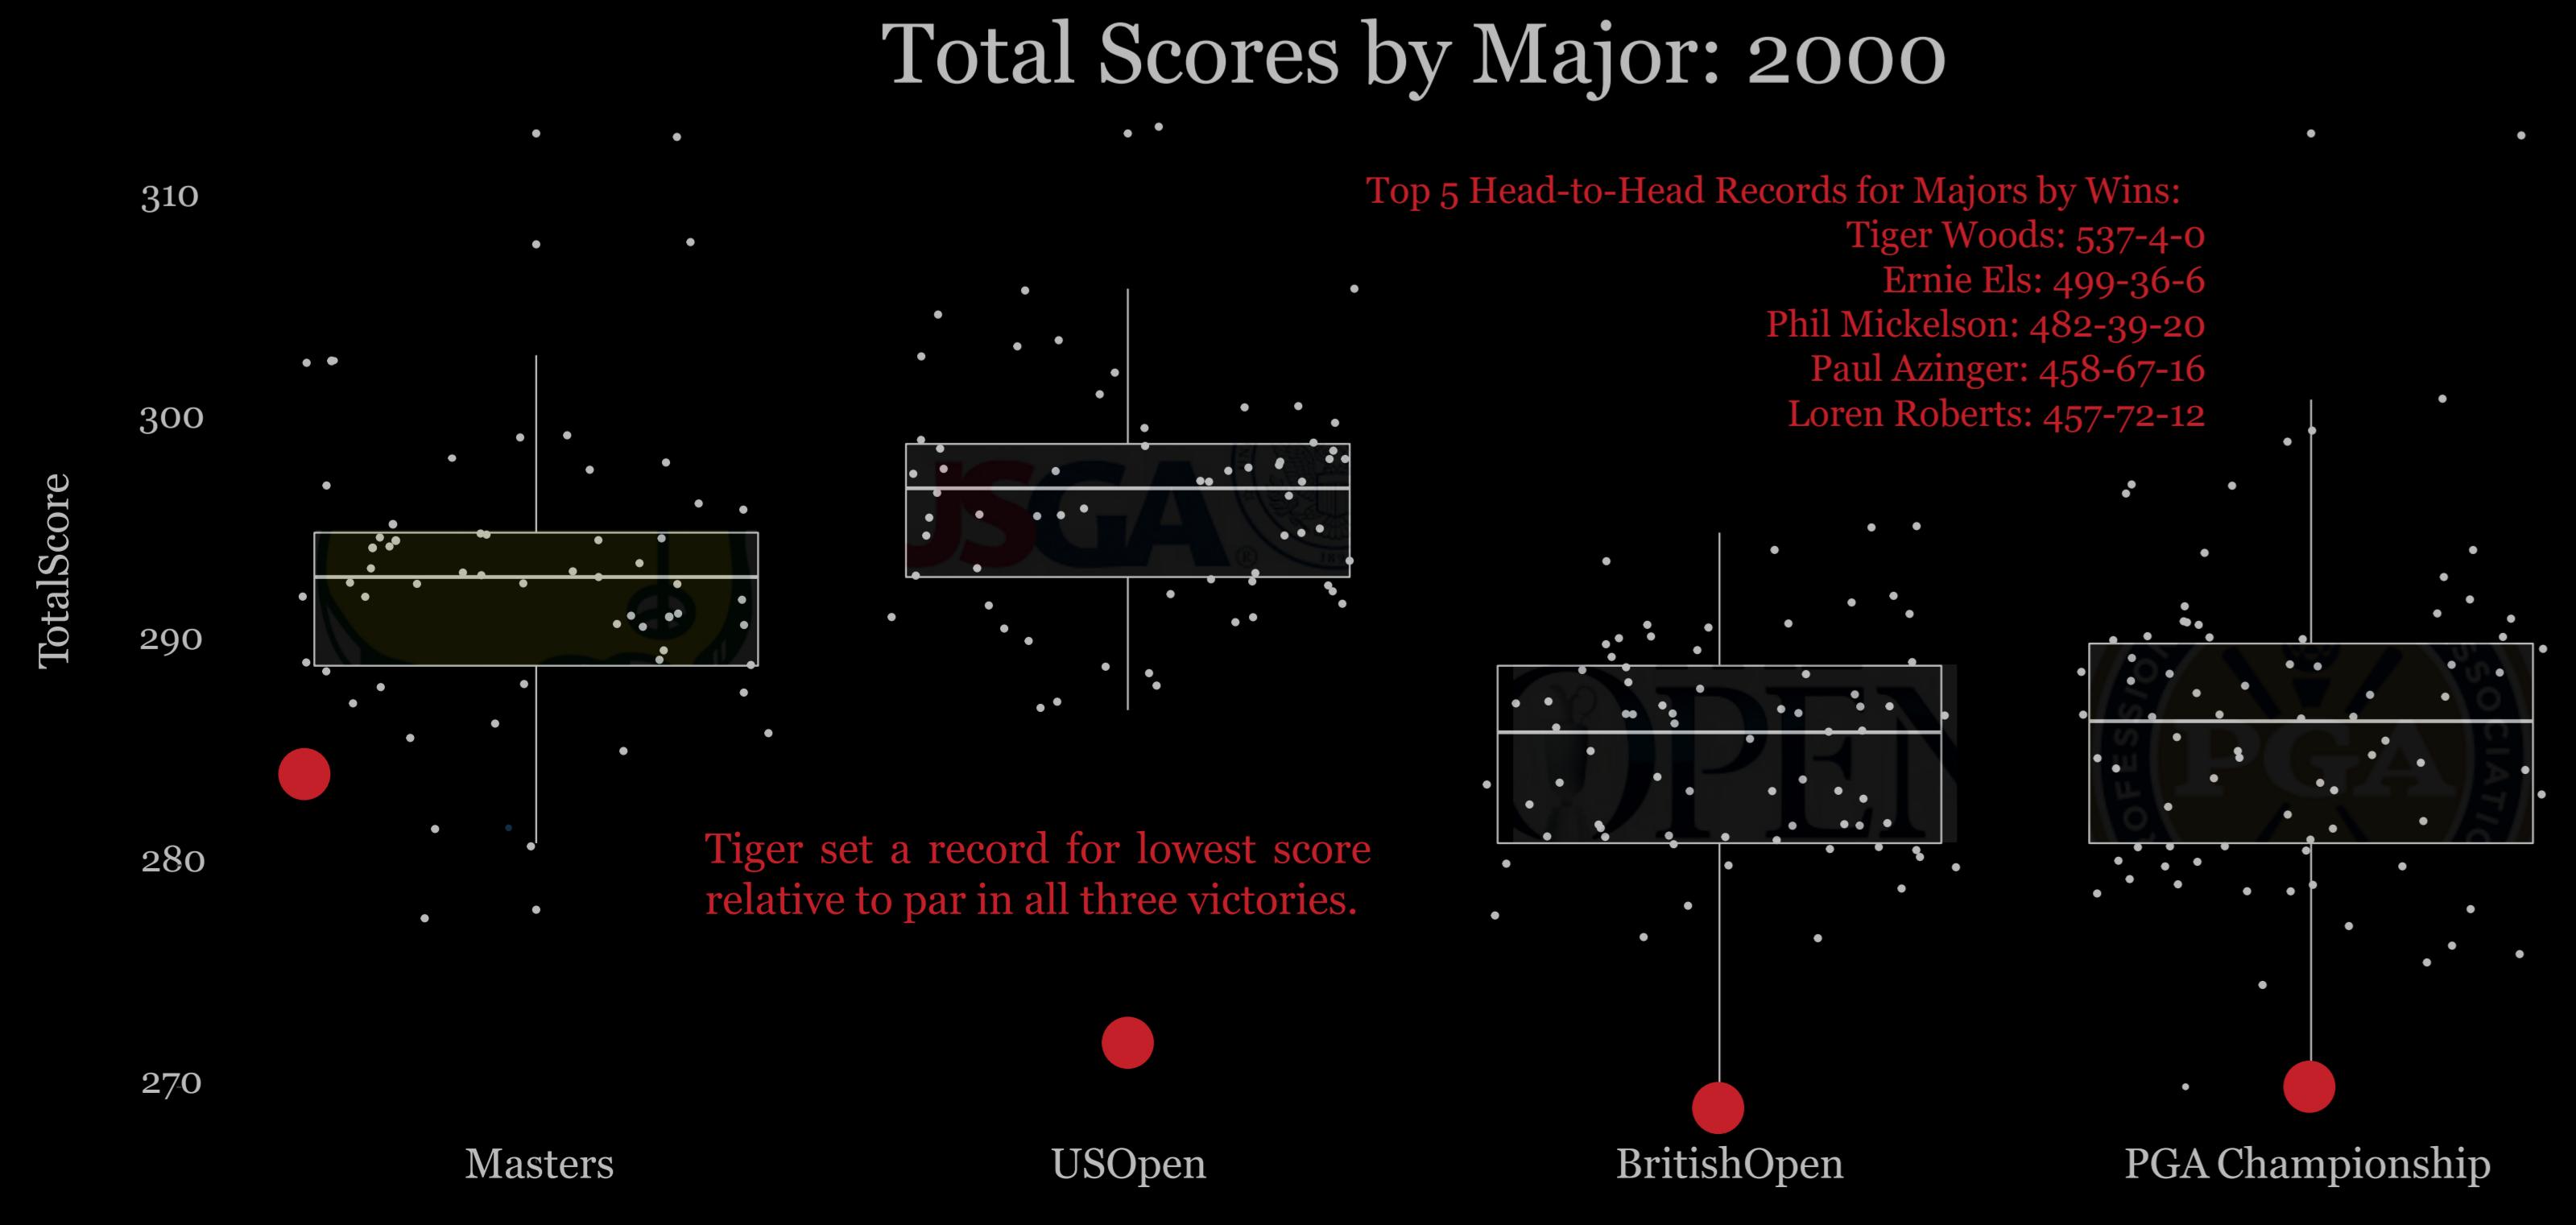

About the Data: Webscrapping was leveraged to extract all PGA Tour results from 1996 through 2019 along with player statistics from the 2000 season. Subsets of the PGA Tour results identified the best season on the PGA Tour as well as summarizing Tiger's career thus far. The primary dataset consisted of 143,068 rows and 17 columns. Sources included: GolfState.com, PGATour.com, USGA.org, Masters.com, TheOpen.com, PGAChampionship.com.

Tiger Dominated the Tour in 2000 with 9 Wins and 3 Majors

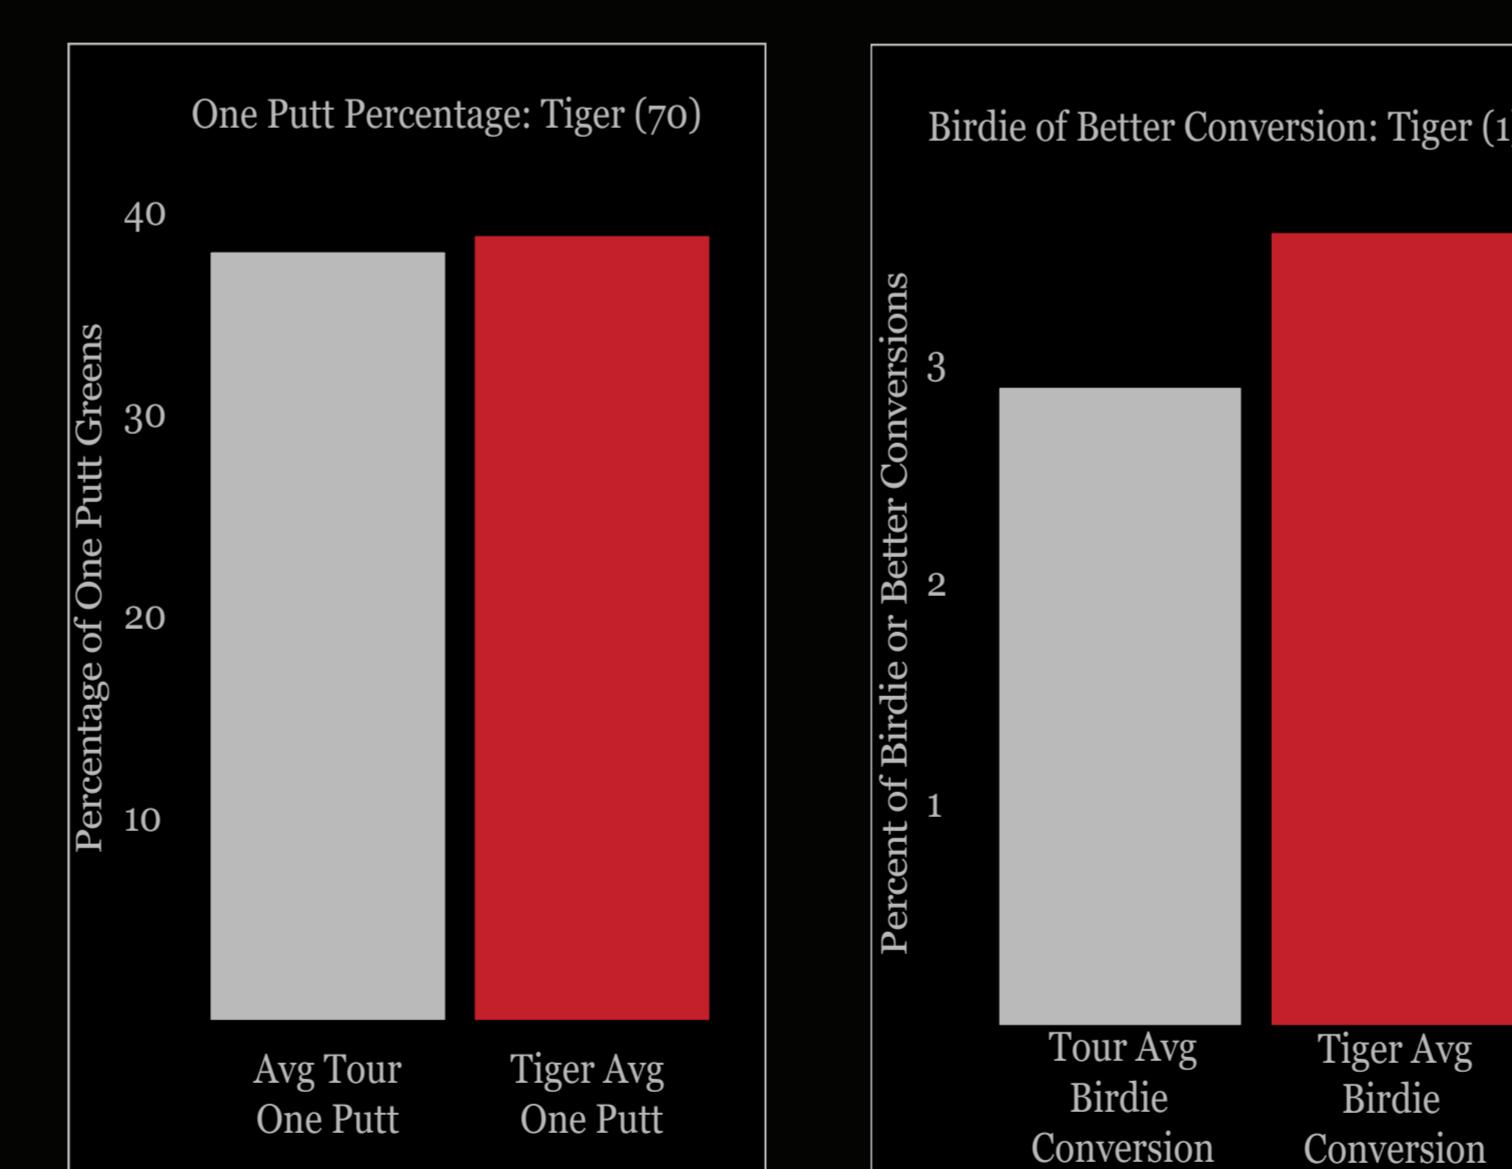

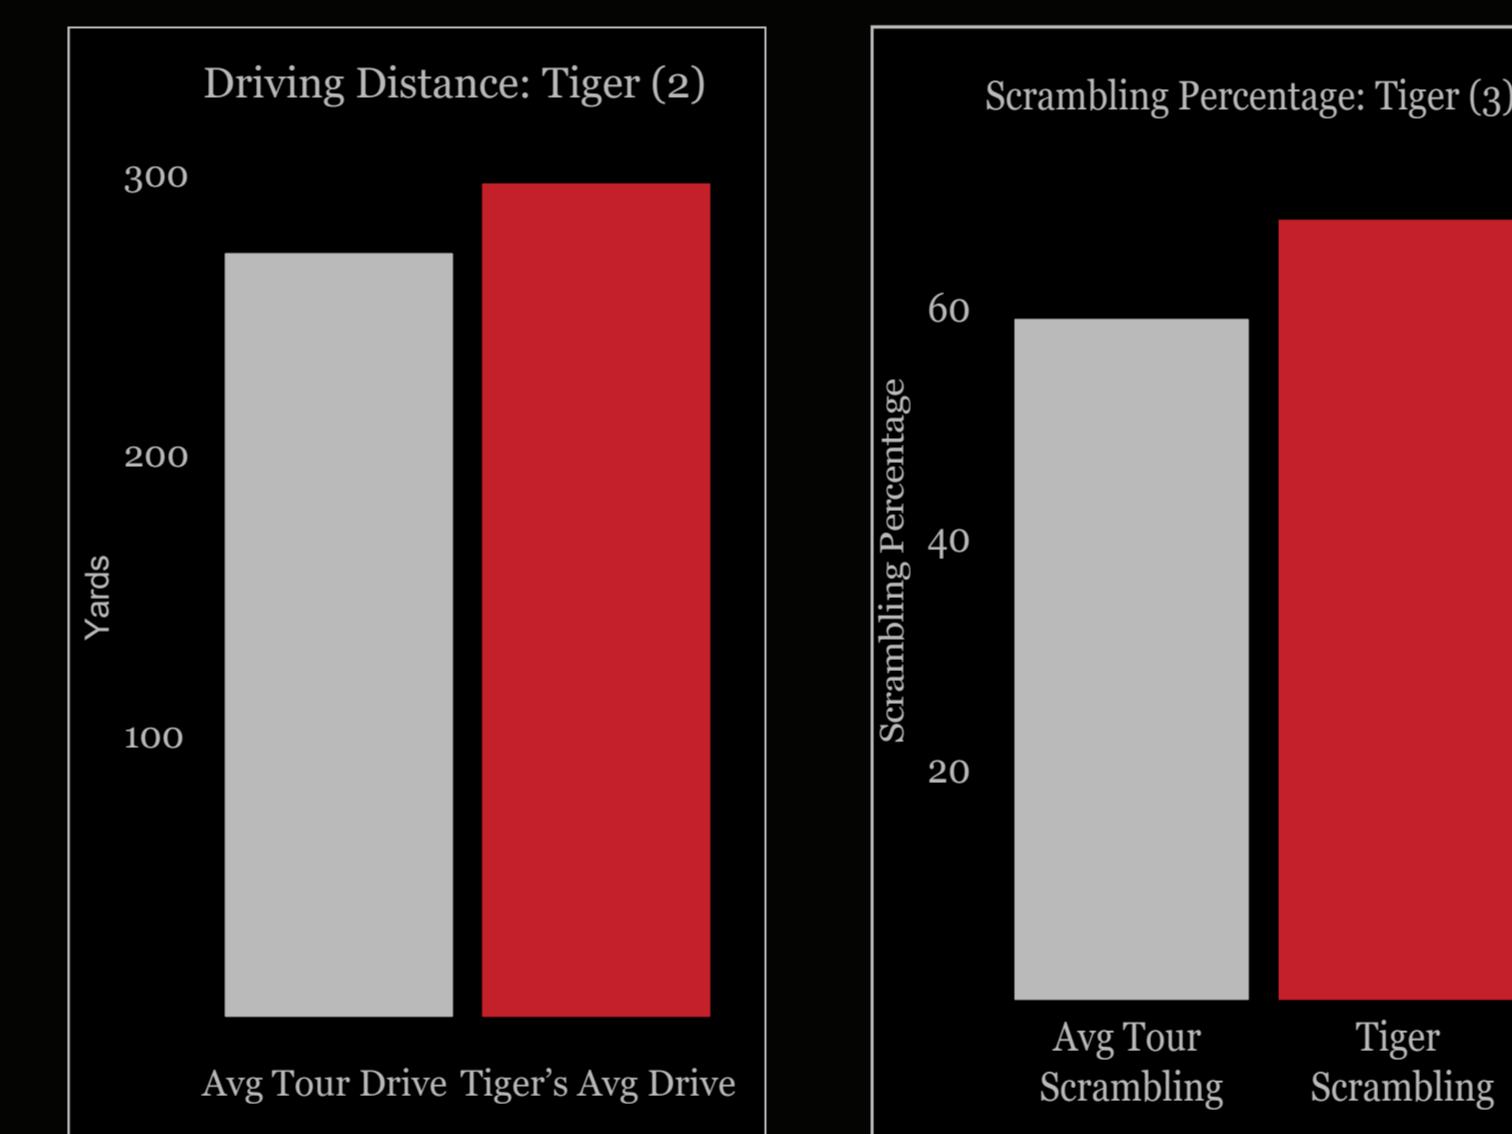

PGA Tour Leaders by Wins Per Season: 1996 - 2019

Total Scores by Major: 2000

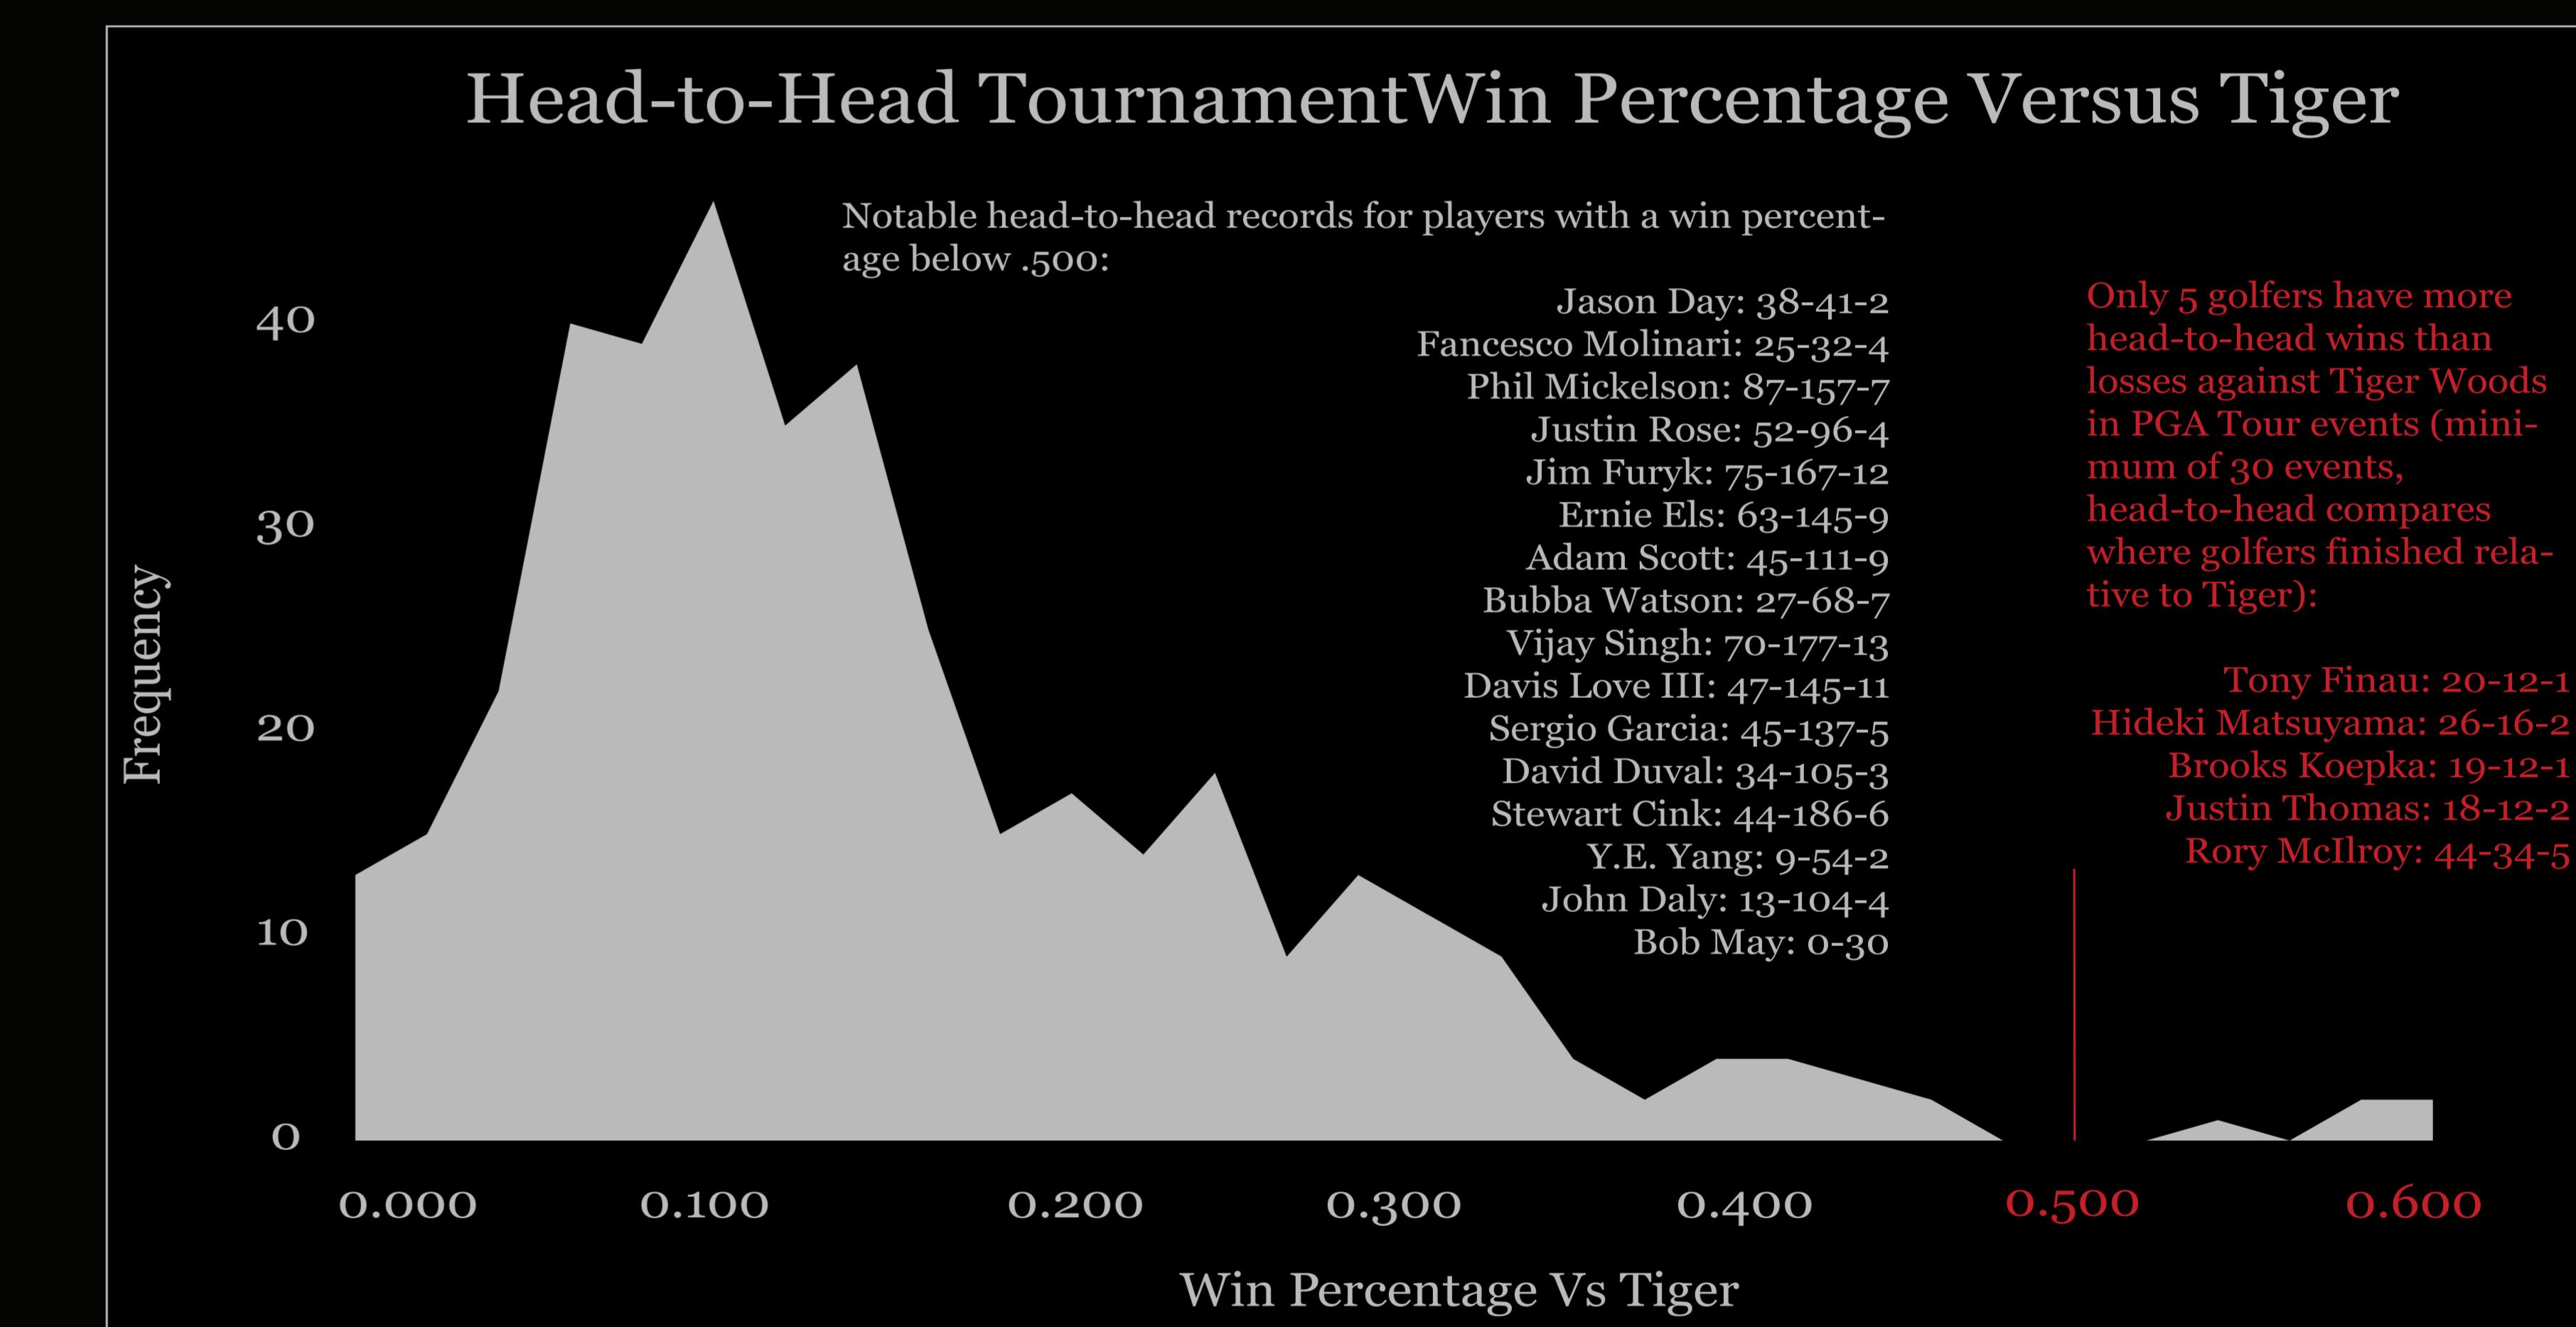

Tiger, had a great year in 2000, but why? Tiger was in the top 3 for 6 statistically significant categories during the 2000 season and was better than average in all

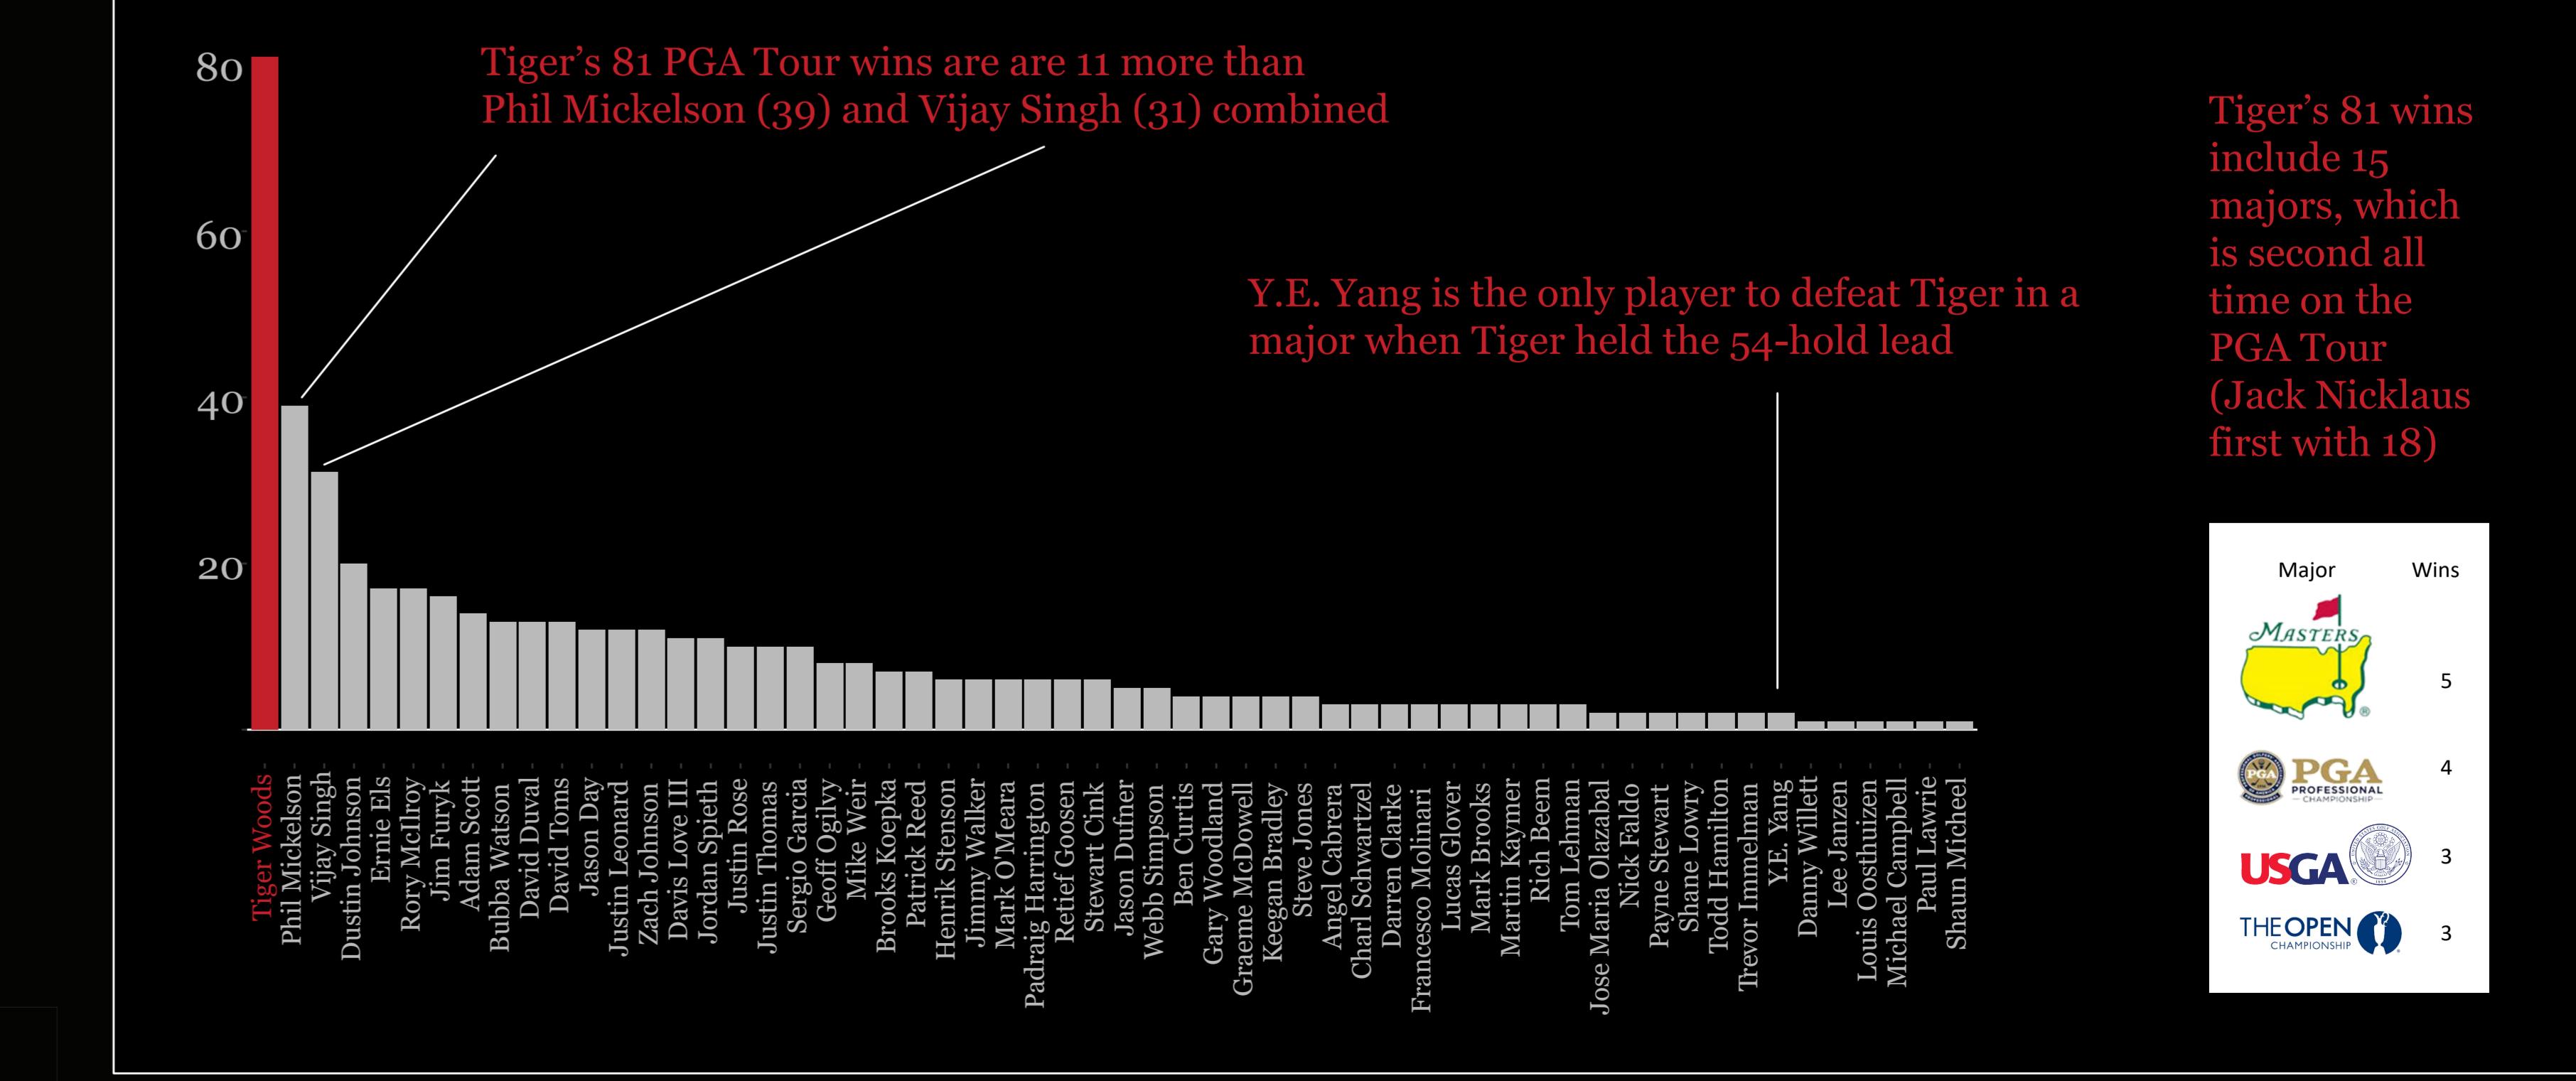

Tiger has always shown this propensity to dominate and few golfers have been able to defeat him on a consistent basis.

Head-to-Head Tournament Win Percentage Versus Tiger

Wins on PGA Tour by Players With At Least One Major: 1996 - 2019

Tiger's 81 wins include 15 majors, which is second all time on the PGA Tour (Jack Nicklaus first with 18)

